2. What are the safety precautions?

- Wear appropriate personal protective equipment (PPE), including gloves, safety glasses, and a lab coat.
- Handle samples with care and use proper chemical disposal methods.
- Be aware of electrical hazards and do not perform any unauthorized modifications to the equipment.

3. What is the setup procedure?

- Calibrate the spectrometer using the provided standard sample.

- Install the appropriate sample holder and objective lens.
- Focus the laser beam on the desired sample area and adjust the power settings.
- Set the acquisition parameters, including wavelength range, integration time, and accumulation count.

4. How do I acquire a Raman spectrum?

- Position the sample under the laser beam and adjust the focus until a clear signal is obtained.
- Start the acquisition by pressing the "Acquire" button in the software.
- Monitor the signal progress and adjust the acquisition parameters as needed.
- Save the acquired spectrum for analysis.

5. What are the post-acquisition steps?

- Process the spectrum using the provided software, including baseline correction, noise reduction, and peak fitting.
- Perform chemical identification based on the vibrational modes observed in the spectrum.
- Document all experimental parameters and results in the laboratory notebook for traceability and future reference.
