Two Kinds of Faith by E.W. Kenyon

Question: What are the two kinds of faith described by E.W. Kenyon?

Answer: Kenyon speaks of "head faith" and "heart faith." Head faith is based on intellectual assent to the truth, while heart faith is a deep-seated conviction that integrates the truth into our being.

Question: How does head faith differ from heart faith?

Answer: Head faith is superficial and external, relying on logical reasoning and external evidence. Heart faith, on the other hand, is internalized and transformative, resulting in a personal encounter with God and the transformative power of His Word.

Question: Why is heart faith more powerful than head faith?

Answer: Heart faith connects us to the spiritual realm and the power of God. It activates the faith that moves mountains, heals the sick, and transforms lives. When we speak from heart faith, we release the power of God's Word into the world.

Question: How can we cultivate heart faith?

Answer: Kenyon suggests that we meditate on the Word of God until it becomes a part of our being. Through consistent Bible reading, prayer, and time spent in God's presence, we can move from head faith to heart faith and experience the transformative power of God in our lives.

Question: What are the benefits of heart faith?

Answer: Heart faith brings peace, joy, and fulfillment. It empowers us to overcome challenges, live victoriously, and become effective witnesses for Christ. Ultimately, heart faith leads us into a deeper relationship with God, transforming us into His image and purpose.
