The Most Cited Researchers Developed for ShanghaiRanking

What is the ShanghaiRanking list of the Most Cited Researchers?

The ShanghaiRanking list of the Most Cited Researchers is an annual ranking of the world's most influential researchers in various academic fields. Compiled by the ShanghaiRanking Consultancy, the list uses citation data from Scopus to identify researchers who have made significant contributions to their respective fields over the past decade.

How are researchers selected for the list?

Researchers are selected for the list based on their total number of citations in Scopus, as well as their field-weighted citation impact (FWCI). The FWCI is a measure of the relative impact of a researcher's citations in their field, taking into account the average number of citations per paper in the field.

What are the key fields included in the ranking?

The Most Cited Researchers list includes over 20 different fields, including medicine, electrical engineering, computer science, economics, and materials science. The fields are selected based on their importance in academic research and their impact on society.

What is the significance of this ranking?

The ShanghaiRanking list of the Most Cited Researchers is considered one of the most prestigious academic rankings in the world. It provides a valuable resource for identifying the leading researchers in various fields and assessing their impact on the academic community.

How can I access the ranking?

The ShanghaiRanking list of the Most Cited Researchers is available online at the ShanghaiRanking website. The list is updated annually and provides detailed information on the researchers, their institutions, and their field-specific impact.
