What is the irony in the luncheon? Answer: During the lunch, the woman orders expensive dishes and wines, and the writer ends up with a hefty bill that he can't afford. The irony in this story lies in the fact that the writer, who is not wealthy, is taken advantage of by the woman who orders expensive food and drinks, and he ends up paying for it.

What do we learn from the story the luncheon? Expert-Verified Answer. Answer: The lesson that can be found in the humorous short story is that flattery and pride hamper the young man's ability to be truthful with his guest. Instead of explaining his financial situation, he allows her to continue to order expensive items from the menu.

What was the narrator's impression of the lady when he met her for the luncheon? The narrator gathered the impression that the lady was very talkative in nature and her appearance was imposing rather than attractive.

What were the things ordered at the luncheon? What were the things ordered at the luncheon? Ans: Salmon fish, caviar, mutton chop, White Wine, Champagne, huge asparagus, coffee, and ice cream were among the items requested for the luncheon.

Why did the narrator's heart sink in The Luncheon? The narrator's heart stopped twice during lunch. His heart sank a little when the woman placed the order for the caviar. Even though he knew he wouldn't be able to buy caviar, he couldn't tell her.

Why did she say I never eat anything for luncheon explain the irony? The irony in this line is that despite repeating this sentence the lady had ordered as many as six items from the menu at the restaurant. It is ironic because the repetition of the line by the lady and her actions were completely opposite.

What is the central idea of The Luncheon? The primary theme of the short story 'Luncheon' by Somerset Maugham is appearance vs. reality. The speaker, in 'Luncheon', wishes from the beginning that his date would be a beautiful woman. He imagines a portrayal of a graceful lady in his mind.

What is the conclusion of The Luncheon? Conclusion. It is clear from the anecdote how the lady was self-centered. This is due to her declaration that she never eats anything for luncheon before the luncheon had started. Even though she had earlier said that she never ate more than one item for lunch, she afterwards bought the most costly foods on the menu.

How did the lady exploit the writer in The Luncheon? The luncheon date is proposed to the author by a woman whom he ironically thinks as a supporter of his art. But, the lady intends to exploit the narrator by pretending an interest and admiration for his work. She was not feeling any actual interest.

Why did he decide to invite the lady for luncheon? Why did he decide to invite the lady for luncheon? He was flattered and he was far too young to have learned to say 'No' to a woman. ... He had 80 francs with him and a modest lunch would not cost him more than fifteen francs. If he cut out the coffee for two more weeks, he could manage well.

How did the author bring about a twist in the story "The Luncheon"? Much of the humor in Somerset Maugham's short story "The Luncheon" derives from the fact that the narrator is trying to appear sophisticated, urbane, and gallant, whereas he really can't afford to be entertaining this woman in such an expensive restaurant as Foyot's.

What was the lady's excuse for ordering champagne? Answer: Her excuse for ordering champagne was that her doctor wouldn't have let her drink anything but champagne .

What is ironic in the luncheon? Overall, the irony in "The Luncheon" arises from the stark contrast between the narrator's expectations of a pleasant reunion and a simple lunch and the reality of an extravagant and costly meal, orchestrated by Mrs. Fernanda without regard for his financial situation.

What is the message of the luncheon? The lesson that can be found in the humorous short story is that flattery and pride hamper the young man's ability to be truthful with his guest. Instead of explaining his financial situation, he allows her to continue to order expensive items from the menu.

How did the narrator have his revenge in the luncheon? Answer: The narrator had his revenge at last when he came to know that she now weighs twenty one stones which means she had grown very fat. So, these were the Questions & Answers Of The Luncheon.

What was the irony in the story? Irony in literature is a situation where there is a contrast between reality and expectations. The powerful literary device, irony, occurs when the actual meaning of a word is the opposite of what is stated, thereby showing an incongruity, that is, a situation at odds with what is true or real.

What kind of irony is present in the story? The three most common kinds you'll find in literature classrooms are verbal irony, dramatic irony, and situational irony. Verbal irony occurs whenever a speaker or narrator tells us something that differs from what they mean, what they intend, or what the situation requires.

What is the irony in the Anne Frank play? Frank gives Anne a diary. The audience knows that Anne will eventually become famous for the words she writes in this diary. Yet, to the characters in the play, it is just a simple, thoughtful gift. This creates dramatic irony because the audience possesses knowledge that the characters themselves do not.

What kind of irony is used in The Story of an Hour? Situational irony is used in "The Story of an Hour" through Mrs. Mallard's reaction to her husband's death and the description of the settings around her at this time.

What is the dramatic irony happened in the story? Dramatic irony is when the audience knows more than the character. It creates tension and suspense. Situational irony occurs when there is a difference between what is expected to happen and what actually happens. For example, a fire station burning down is a case of situational irony.

What is the point of irony in a story? Irony brings depth, insight, and creativity in the process of storytelling. In literature, irony is used to bring complexity in the narrative structure, create suspense, and contrast knowledge and ignorance, expectation and reality.

What are the 5 examples of irony? The five main types of irony are verbal, dramatic, situational, cosmic and Socratic.

What is the irony in this situation? Situational irony is when the outcome is the opposite or completely different from what was expected. Situational irony involves the result of a situation not matching with your expectations, such as a baker being allergic to flour.

What does a joy that kills mean? What does “a joy that kills” mean? The last line of the story ends on an ominous note as Chopin describes Louise's heart disease as “a joy that kills.” While the characters in the story may believe that the joy of her husband's return caused her death, readers can infer that the loss of joy is ultimately to blame.

What has actually killed Mrs. Mallard? Louise Mallard's death was ruled "heart disease" by the doctors that came after her collapse. They determined that it was from joy, believing that she was so overwhelmed with emotion from seeing her presumed-dead husband that her heart couldn't physically handle it.

Why is the last line of The Story of an Hour ironic? The ending implies that her only escape from being dependent on her husband is, ironically, death. Then, the doctors' assumption that Louise died of “joy that kills” is dramatic irony, because the reader knows that Louise's heart failure was likely caused by extreme disappointment, the opposite of extreme joy.
