Screw Pumps: A Comprehensive Guide

Q: What are screw pumps?

A: Screw pumps are positive displacement pumps that utilize two intermeshing helical screws to move fluids. The screws are mounted on parallel shafts, and as they rotate, they create a sealing line that traps fluid between them and the pump casing.

Q: How do screw pumps work?

A: As the screws rotate, the fluid is conveyed in a continuous and axial motion along the screw's axis. The pumped fluid is trapped between the screw threads and the pump casing, creating a positive seal that prevents leakage. The rotating screws also act as a seal, eliminating the need for additional sealing mechanisms.
