How do you use Citadel base paint?

Do Citadel base paints need to be thinned? Truthfully, it depends entirely on the Contrast Paint you're using. Some are already very thin, more like a traditional wash, while others are thicker and may be better off thinning down before globbing it onto your miniature. You won't know for sure until you open up that bottle of paint and put it on your brush.

Is Citadel paint just acrylic? All Citadel paints are non-toxic, water-based acrylic that are designed for use on plastic, metal, and resin Citadel miniatures.

Can Citadel paint be thinned with water?

What is the best thinner for Citadel paint? The Citadel Air Caste Thinner is an additive to be used with Citadel Colours to make them airbrush ready. Air Caste Thinner is used to reduce the paint to a milky consistency and to reduce the size of the paint pigment.

How much to water down Citadel paint?

Are Citadel paints waterproof? The big differences being that Citadel paints have a higher pigment concentration than craft paints, they flow better, and are also waterproof.

Are Citadel paints safe for skin? CITADEL PAINTS All of our paints are water-based acrylics and are safe to use. However, if spilt on some fabrics they may leave a permanent stain. When attending club sessions, encourage young people to bring old clothes or supply them with aprons in case an accident occurs.

What paint is best for miniatures? I recommend acrylic paints, the kind found in craft stores like Hobby Lobby, Michael's, or Jo-Ann Fabrics. They clean up and thin easily with warm water. One can clean them up with mild liquid dish soap as well. They tend to be smooth and often somewhat thinner than enamels.

How do you apply base paint?

What is base 1, 2, 3, and 4 paint?

What is the difference between base and layer Citadel paint? Layer paints have less pigment in than Base paints and flow better from the brush. They're designed to be applied on top of Base paints to make them brighter, or to add highlights.

How does base coat paint work? The base coat is the first layer of paint applied to the surface after the primer, it provides the base colour, complexion and usually influences the finish of the topcoat. Typically, base coats do not use a gloss finish.
