What is contrastive analysis and error analysis? Contrastive analysis starts with a comparison of systems of two languages and predicts only the areas of difficulty or error for the second language learner, whereas error analysis starts with errors in second language learning and studies them in the broader framework of their sources and significance.

What are the 5 stages of error analysis? Corder (1974) discusses the error analysis in five stages: collection of data containing errors, classification of errors, identification of errors, disclosure of errors and evaluation of errors.

What are the three types of error analysis in linguistics? For example, a learner may produce *He is comes, based on a blend of the English structures He is coming, He comes. errors.

Error analysis investigates the problems caused by difficulties inherent in the language being learned, while contrastive analysis studies the difficulties caused by the differences in structure between one language and another and attempts to predict where errors will occur.

What is criticism against contrastive analysis? The criticism is that Contrastive Analysis hypothesis could not be sustained by empirical evidence. It was soon pointed out that many errors predicted by Contrastive Analysis were inexplicably not observed in learners' language. Even more confusingly, some uniform errors were made by learners irrespective of their L1.

What are the four major procedures of contrastive analysis? A contrastive analysis must proceed through four steps: description, selection, contrast, and prediction. Most analyses are weakened by insufficient care at one or more of these steps, each of which is beset with problems.

What is the meaning of error analysis? What is error analysis? Error analysis is a method used to document the errors that appear in learner language, determine whether those errors are systematic, and (if possible) explain what caused them.
