Was Albert Camus' mom deaf? His cherished mother was half deaf and illiterate. Throughout his life he would maintain an exceptionally close contact with her that went beyond the usual filial connection.

How many children did Camus and his wife have? The newspaper was banned, and Camus moved to Paris, where he subsequently worked as a journalist and author and in the theater. He married Francine Faure and they had twins, Catherine and Jean. Camus died at age 46 in an auto accident.

Did Camus consider himself Algerian? Camus considers himself as Algerian as those he calls “Arab”, in a generic and incorrect way, like the “French”, whose origins are also diverse: “Arab and French, awakened in every corner of Algeria, sons and daughters without fathers who would now have to learn to live without guidance and without heritage,” he writes ...
