The Structure of Argument, 7th Edition

Introduction

"The Structure of Argument," 7th Edition, by Annette T. Rottenberg and Martha V. Paradis, is a comprehensive guide to understanding and constructing persuasive arguments. The book provides a framework for analyzing and evaluating arguments, helping readers to develop critical thinking skills and effectively communicate their own ideas.

Question 1: What is the basic structure of an argument?

Answer: According to Rottenberg and Paradis, an argument consists of three main components:

- Claim: The central assertion or proposition being argued.
- Reasons: Evidence, data, or premises that support the claim.
- Warrant: The underlying assumption or principle that connects the reasons to the claim.

Question 2: What are the different types of arguments?

Answer: Rottenberg and Paradis identify four main types of arguments:

- Deductive: Arguments where the conclusion is logically inferred from the premises.

- Inductive: Arguments where the conclusion is a probable inference based on evidence or observations.
- Causal: Arguments where the claim is that one event (the cause) led to another event (the effect).
- Analogical: Arguments where the claim is that something is similar to something else, and therefore the same rules or principles apply.

Question 3: How can I evaluate the strength of an argument?

Answer: Rottenberg and Paradis offer several criteria for evaluating arguments:

- Validity: Whether the argument follows the logical rules of inference.
- Soundness: Whether the reasons are relevant, sufficient, and true.
- Persuasiveness: Whether the argument effectively convinces the intended audience.

Question 4: How can I construct an effective argument?

Answer: Creating a strong argument involves:

- Identifying a clear claim and supporting reasons.
- Establishing a logical connection between the reasons and the claim.
- Anticipating and addressing potential objections.
- Supporting claims with evidence and logical reasoning.

Question 5: What are some common argumentative fallacies?

Answer: Rottenberg and Paradis identify several common fallacies to avoid:

- Ad hominem: Attacking the person making the argument rather than addressing the substance of the argument.
- Appeal to ignorance: Assuming something is true because it has not been proven false.
- Circular reasoning: Using the same evidence to support both the claim and the reasons.
- Overgeneralization: Drawing conclusions from an insufficient sample size.
