Solutions to Introductory Statistical Mechanics by Bowley

Question 1: What is the Maxwell-Boltzmann distribution?

Answer: The Maxwell-Boltzmann distribution describes the distribution of molecular energies in a gas and can be used to calculate macroscopic properties like temperature and pressure.

Question 2: How does the Boltzmann factor relate to equilibrium and temperature?

Answer: The Boltzmann factor, $e^{-E/kT}$, where E is the energy, k is Boltzmann's constant, and T is temperature, represents the probability of finding a particle with a particular energy. As temperature increases, the Boltzmann factor decreases, indicating a preference for lower energy states at equilibrium.

Question 3: What is the partition function and how is it related to entropy?

Answer: The partition function, Q , is the sum of the Boltzmann factors over all possible states of a system. Entropy, S , is related to the partition function by the equation $S = k \ln Q$, indicating the number of possible states available to the system.

Question 4: What is the Gibbs free energy and how does it determine spontaneity?

Answer: The Gibbs free energy, G , is defined as $G = H - TS$, where H is enthalpy, T is temperature, and S is entropy. A decrease in G indicates spontaneity, as the system will spontaneously move towards a state with lower free energy.

Question 5: How can the van der Waals equation of state be used to model real gas behavior?

Answer: The van der Waals equation of state takes into account intermolecular attractions and finite molecular volume, making it more accurate for modeling real gases than the ideal gas equation. The equation includes additional terms for pressure and volume correction.
