

Architecture and violence

Download Complete File

What is architectural violence? Any relationship between a building and its users is one of violence, for any use means the intrusion of a human body into a given space, the intrusion of one order into another.

What does hostile architecture look like? Hostile Architecture Can Take Many Forms Hostile architecture may look like spikes on window sills, public parks with fences so high they resemble prisons or the removal of trees, resulting in little to no protection from the elements.

What is oppressive architecture? Oppressive Architecture explores and documents the relationship between architecture and oppression in different historical moments - American slavery and German Nazism. Oppressive architectural structures are being photographed in a cross-section of places in both countries.
