SPM Physics Form 5 Chapter 2: Electricity

Question 1: Explain the difference between resistance and resistivity.

Answer: Resistance is a measure of the opposition to the flow of current through a material, while resistivity is a property of the material itself that determines its resistance. Resistivity is a constant for a given material and is independent of its shape or size.

Question 2: A wire of length 2m and resistance 10 Ω is cut into two equal parts. What is the resistance of each part?

Answer: The resistance of a wire is directly proportional to its length, so each part will have a resistance of 5 Ω .

Question 3: What is the difference between an insulator and a conductor?

Answer: An insulator is a material that has a high resistivity and does not allow current to flow easily, while a conductor is a material that has a low resistivity and allows current to flow easily.

Question 4: A battery of 9V is connected to a resistor of 3 Ω . What is the current flowing through the circuit?

Answer: Ohm's law states that current is directly proportional to voltage and inversely proportional to resistance. Therefore, the current flowing through the circuit is $9V / 3\Omega = 3A$.

Question 5: A circuit contains a battery, a resistor, and a capacitor. What happens when the capacitor is fully charged?

Answer: When the capacitor is fully charged, the current flowing through the circuit will stop, as the capacitor acts as an open circuit. The voltage across the capacitor will be equal to the voltage of the battery.
