What is translation theory in translation studies? The theory of translation is a complex and multidisciplinary field that sits at the intersection of science and art. At its core, linguistic theory of translation is the process of conveying the essence and intent of a source text from one language to another, bridging the gap between different languages and cultures.

Who was the early theorist in translation studies? James Holmes (1924 – 1986) was an American translation theorist of the early phase and he himself was a poet and translator. Dismissing the concept of equivalence he maintained that the referent of the translated work was not the same as that of the SL text but a linguistic formulation.

He proposes that semantic translation is used for expressive texts and communicative for informative and vocative texts. In translating expressive texts, the expressive components should be rendered closely.

What is the Christology of Schleiermacher? According to Schleiermacher's second Christological theorem, "In the uniting of the divine nature with the human, the divine alone was active or self-imparting, and the human alone passive or in process of being assumed; but during the state of union every activity was a common activity of both natures" (CF, §97).

What is the theological method of Schleiermacher? What Friedrich Schleiermacher is most known for is his theological method of deriving doctrine from religious experience. He believed that religious piety is to be found in the "feeling of absolute dependence", and all subsequent doctrines must be discovered through reflection upon religious experience.

Did Schleiermacher believe in the Trinity? Schleiermacher has been severely criticized for his doctrine of the Trinity, perhaps more than for any other element of his theology.

What are the two methods of translation according to Schleiermacher? Schleiermacher in fact finds only two methods of effecting the target- language reader's understanding of the source-language "author": "Either the translator leaves the author in peace, as much as possible, and moves the reader towards him; or he leaves the reader in peace, as much as possible, and moves the author ...
