The Fruits of Graft: Great Depressions Then and Now

In the wake of the current economic crisis, many have drawn parallels to the Great Depression of the 1930s. While there are certainly similarities, there are also key differences between the two periods.

1. What caused the Great Depression?

The Great Depression was sparked by the stock market crash of 1929, which led to a loss of confidence in the economy. This resulted in a decline in investment and spending, which in turn led to widespread job losses and factory closures.

2. What caused the current economic crisis?

The current economic crisis was triggered by the subprime mortgage crisis, which led to a collapse in the housing market and a loss of confidence in the financial system. This resulted in a decline in lending and investment, which in turn has led to widespread job losses and business closures.

3. How is the current economic crisis different from the Great Depression?

While the Great Depression and the current economic crisis share some similarities, there are also key differences. For example, the current crisis is more global in nature, affecting countries around the world. Additionally, the current crisis is not as severe as the Great Depression, and the economy is expected to recover more quickly.
