Sewing Machine Repair: Troubleshooting and Fixing Singer 66

---

Question: My Singer 66 sewing machine won't sew a stitch. What could be wrong?

Answer: This issue typically indicates a problem with the needle or the thread path. Check if the needle is inserted correctly and the thread is threaded properly. Ensure there are no tangles or obstructions in the bobbin area or the needle plate.

Question: The stitches on my Singer 66 are uneven or skipping. How can I fix this?

Answer: Uneven or skipped stitches often result from tension issues. Adjust the upper thread tension dial until the stitches are balanced. Additionally, check if the bobbin tension is correct. Replace the bobbin if it's damaged or worn.

Question: My Singer 66 is making a loud noise when I sew. What's causing this?

Answer: Excessive noise can indicate several issues. Inspect the drive belt for wear or looseness. If necessary, replace the belt. Also, check the motor bearings for lubrication. Apply a few drops of sewing machine oil to ensure smooth operation.

Question: The foot pedal of my Singer 66 isn't working properly. How can I troubleshoot this?

Answer: Check if the foot pedal is connected securely to the machine. If it's loose, tighten the connection. Clean the contacts on both the foot pedal and the machine with a cotton swab dipped in rubbing alcohol. If the problem persists, the foot pedal may need replacement.

Question: I'm having trouble threading my Singer 66. What's the correct procedure?

Answer: Start by raising the presser foot. Thread the upper thread through the tension discs and the thread guide. Pass it through the needle from back to front. Next, wind the bobbin and insert it into the bobbin case. Pull the thread end through the small slot in the case and guide it around the tension spring. Finally, lift the bobbin case into the machine and draw the upper and lower threads together.
