The Bridges of God: A Natural Wonder in Utah

What are the Bridges of God?

The Bridges of God are a series of three natural sandstone bridges located in San Juan County, Utah. Formed by the erosion of the White Rim Trail, these bridges span the canyons of the Colorado River. The largest of the three, known as the Kolob Crossing, is an impressive 128 feet wide and 200 feet tall.

How did the Bridges of God form?

Over millions of years, the Colorado River has carved out canyons into the sandstone bedrock of the region. The Bridges of God were formed when wind and water eroded the softer sandstone, leaving behind the more resistant layers in the form of bridges. The three bridges are located in a line, suggesting that they were once part of a single larger bridge that collapsed over time.

Why are the Bridges of God so famous?

The Bridges of God have become a popular tourist destination due to their unique beauty and geologic significance. They are accessible via a scenic drive along the White Rim Trail, offering breathtaking views of the canyons and bridges.

What is the best way to experience the Bridges of God?

The best way to experience the Bridges of God is to hike or drive along the White Rim Trail. The trail offers multiple viewpoints of the bridges, allowing visitors to fully appreciate their grandeur. The trail is open year-round, but weather conditions can vary, so check the forecast before embarking on your journey.

What other attractions are nearby?

The Bridges of God are located within the Glen Canyon National Recreation Area, which offers a variety of other attractions. Visitors can explore the canyons by hiking, rafting, or kayaking, or visit the nearby Horseshoe Bend, another stunning natural formation.
