2017 Canada Games Selection Criteria: A Detailed Guide

What is the 2017 Canada Games Selection Criteria?

The 2017 Canada Games Selection Criteria outlined the rules for selecting athletes to represent their provinces or territories at the 2017 Canada Games, held in Winnipeg, Manitoba. The document provided guidelines on eligibility, performance standards, and the selection process.

Eligibility Requirements

To be eligible for selection, athletes had to meet the following requirements:

- Be a Canadian citizen or permanent resident
- Reside in the province or territory they represented
- Be within the specified age limits for their sport
- Have achieved a qualifying standard set by the sport's governing body

Performance Standards

Each sport had specific performance standards that athletes needed to meet to be considered for selection. These standards were based on previous national and international results, and were intended to ensure that only the top athletes in the country represented Canada at the Games.

The Selection Process

The selection process varied depending on the sport. In some cases, athletes were selected based on their performance at national competitions. In other sports, athletes participated in tryouts or were invited to training camps to demonstrate their skills. The final selections were made by a panel of experts in each sport.

Criteria for Team Sports

For team sports, the selection process included not only individual performance but also team chemistry and overall competitiveness. The selection committee considered factors such as the team's record, player evaluations, and the team's potential for success at the Games.
