Download Complete File

Are Great Danes easy to care for? Due to the well-mannered and friendly Great Dane temperament, it is simple to look after the breed. Great Dane care includes dental hygiene, ear cleaning, exercise, and good nutrition. The Great Dane does not have high grooming needs, so you should only have to brush their coat every month or every week if needed.

Are Great Danes high maintenance? Great Danes are fairly low maintenance when it comes to grooming. Thanks to their short coat, a quick brush once a week will suffice. You should only need to bathe your Great Dane when they get muddy. Although their coats won't take much upkeep, they are known to be droolers.

What not to do with a Great Dane?

Are Great Danes difficult to train? Great Danes are trainable, but they can also have minds of their own. Stanley Coren, in his book The Intelligence of Dogs, classified them as “average working dogs” who usually understood new commands in 25 to 40 repetitions and obeyed the first command at least half the time.

Are Great Danes okay left alone? You should never leave your dog alone for more than four hours and you may find that your Great Dane needs training to be left even for shorter periods. A lonely and anxious Great Dane might be destructive around the home.

Does a Great Dane bark a lot? Although they are not frequent barkers, they are most certainly loud barkers. A Great Dane's bark is often rumbling, deep and intimidating, but most Great Danes wouldn't hurt a fly. In fact, because of their gentle nature, Danes can make for a wonderful family dog.

Do Great Danes get aggressive? They are relatively relaxed and do not require the high level of activity that some other breeds do. However, while Great Danes are usually friendly, they can also be highly territorial and extremely protective. If its space, home, or family is threatened, a Great Dane may become aggressive.

How often should I bathe a Great Dane? Great Dane's do require regular bathing and grooming. This gentle dog can be bathed weekly up to every six to eight weeks depending on his activity level and lifestyle. With this smooth coated breed, regular bathing is essential to minimize shedding and to maintain healthy skin and coat.

Are Great Danes active or lazy? While Great Danes certainly enjoy relaxing, in my experience I've found them very able, willing, and excited to engage in activities and outings. From simple things like following you around the house to outings like going to the dog park, on hikes, and many others, they're excited to join.

What is the disadvantage of Great Dane? Size: Great Danes are very large dogs, with males reaching up to 32 inches at the shoulder and weighing up to 150 pounds. This can make them difficult to handle for some people, especially if the dog is not well-trained. They can also be intimidating to some people due to their size.

Is a Great Dane a good indoor dog? Great Danes make wonderful family pets however they crave attention, human interaction and must be inside with their family. They do not do well as outside Dogs but they do need a fenced in area for daily exercise and play. Danes should not be outside for very long in cold weather because of their short coats.

What can a Great Dane not eat? DO NOT feed young Great Danes "puppy food". The high protein content can cause Hypertrophic Osteodystrophy (HOD), Panosteitis, Wobblers Syndrome or OCD. Your Dane will have growth, joint and internal problems later. DO NOT give Calcium supplements.

What age do Great Danes calm down? As with any puppy, Great Danes are known to be playful and excitable in their youth. However, when a Great Dane is 1 year and older, they should begin to calm down up until the age of 2. By this point they will have past their adolescence and should become more relaxed over time.

How do you discipline a Great Dane? So, how should you discipline a Great Dane? The best way to discipline your Great Dane is to firmly tell her no and then withhold what she craves most: your attention. On the flip side, reward her for good behavior right away. Positive reinforcement is one of the most effective training techniques!

Do Great Danes talk a lot?

Are Great Danes loyal to one person? Great Danes are in general not “one-man” dogs, but can be characterized as “one-family” dogs. Most Danes will make a clear distinction between their own people-family and friends— and everyone else, and will be friendly but reserved with strangers.

Why do Great Danes not live very long? Joint & Bone Disease With those giant frames, it is no wonder that Great Danes experience joint and bone diseases, such as hip dysplasia and osteoarthritis. These conditions are often gradual and result in a slow deterioration that ultimately requires owners to make a decision about their dog's quality of life.

Do Great Danes sleep a lot? Great Danes have always been valued for their exceptional size, but due to selective breeding to promote this massive size, they are low energy dogs and require a significant amount of quality rest.

What is the lifespan of a Great Dane? The Great Dane life expectancy is between 8-10 years, according to the American Kennel Club (AKC). Some Great Danes only make it to 6 or 7 years, while 12 is considered ancient for a Great Dane.

Why do Great Danes lean against you? He is a big dog, but loveable and gentle. If he can be introduced to you, and get to know you, he will soon lean in to get closer to you. This is the Great Dane's way of showing his affection for the people he has chosen to love.

Do Great Danes pee a lot? Taking a Great Dane outside to pee is a crucial aspect of their care, and the frequency of these bathroom breaks varies depending on the dog's age and individual needs. While puppies require more frequent outings, adult and senior Great Danes can typically hold it for longer periods.

Are Great Danes good dogs for beginners? Great Danes' larger size may make them seem intimidating, but they are actually gentle giants that make fine companions for first-time dog owners. These attributes make the breed a good choice for first-time owners: Intelligence: Great Danes are known for their intelligence, making them relatively easy to train.

What are the pros and cons of owning a Great Dane? Great Danes make wonderful family pets however they crave attention, human interaction and must be inside with their family. They do not do well as outside Dogs but they do need a fenced in area for daily exercise and play. Danes should not be outside for very long in cold weather because of their short coats.

Are Great Danes friendly or aggressive? Great Danes are considered gentle giants. They are moderately playful, affectionate and good with children. They will guard their home. Great Danes generally get along with other animals, particularly if raised with them, but some individuals in the breed can be aggressive with dogs they do not know.

Are Great Danes good indoor dogs? #5: Great Dane Their calm, quiet nature and unparalleled trainability make these friendly giants perfect for your apartment (if there are no weight restrictions, of course). In fact, Great Danes are better suited for apartment living than many smaller, more active breeds due to their peaceful temperament.
