Exploring Concepts and Narratives

The Fisherman: A Summarized Story

"The Fisherman" is a short story by Ursula K. Le Guin that explores the concept of sacrifice and the fragility of life. It tells the tale of a young fisherwoman named Alah who captures an ancient, wise, and talkative sea creature known as the Carp. Facing a dire choice, Alah must decide between her duty to her village and the preservation of a being who embodies ancient knowledge.

The Churten Theory

The Churten theory is a literary framework proposed by Japanese literature scholar Chuya Kikuchi. It suggests that narratives can be divided into four phases: jo (introduction), ha (development), ten (twist), and kestus (resolution). This theory aligns with the traditional Japanese narrative structure known as Kishotenketsu.

Kishotenketsu vs. Three Act Structure

Kishotenketsu and the three act structure are narrative frameworks that divide a story into distinct parts.

- Kishotenketsu: Introduction (jo), Development (ha), Twist (ten), Resolution (kestu)
- Three Act Structure: Set-up (Act 1), Confrontation (Act 2), Resolution (Act 3)

The key difference lies in the "twist" element, which is unique to Kishotenketsu and occurs at the turning point of the narrative.

The Anti-Theory of Theory

The anti-theory of theory does not deny the existence of theory or its importance but rather emphasizes its limitations. It suggests that theoretical frameworks can be restrictive and that creating meaning and understanding should not be confined by rigid structures. The anti-theory of theory advocates for flexibility and open-endedness in literary and philosophical analysis.
