Question 2: How can random variates be generated in Arena?

Answer: Random variates can be generated in Arena using built-in functions, such as the "Uniform" and "Normal" functions. These functions allow users to specify the distribution and parameters of the desired random variable.

Question 3: What is the purpose of the "Fit" module in Arena?

Answer: The "Fit" module in Arena is used to fit statistical distributions to empirical data. This allows users to build more accurate simulation models by using distributions that closely match real-world data.

Question 4: How can the "Validate" module be used to verify simulation results?

Answer: The "Validate" module in Arena provides tools for validating simulation results against empirical data. By comparing simulation outputs to actual performance data, users can assess the accuracy and reliability of their models.

Question 5: What are the key concepts in testing for goodness of fit?
