By R.K. Sinha

Introduction

The Transfer of Property Act, 1882, is a comprehensive legislation that governs the transfer of immovable property in India. It defines the rights, obligations, and procedures involved in the sale, purchase, lease, and mortgage of land and buildings. This article provides a series of questions and answers that address common legal issues arising under the Act.

Q1: What is the definition of "transfer of property"?

A1: Transfer of property refers to the voluntary act of conveying ownership or any interest in immovable property from one person to another. This can include sale, gift, exchange, or lease.

Q2: What are the essential elements of a valid transfer of property?

A2: A valid transfer of property requires the following elements:

- A competent transferor with the legal capacity to transfer the property
- A competent transferee with the legal capacity to receive the property
- A valid conveyance that meets the prescribed legal formalities
- A valuable consideration or any other legal reason for the transfer

Q3: What is the difference between a sale and a mortgage?

A3: A sale involves the absolute transfer of ownership from the seller to the buyer, while a mortgage is a conditional transfer of ownership given as security for a loan. In a mortgage, the borrower (mortgagor) transfers the property to the lender (mortgagee) until the loan is repaid.

Q4: What are the rights and liabilities of a buyer and seller under a sale deed?

A4: The buyer acquires the ownership of the property and the right to possession. The seller is responsible for providing a clear and marketable title to the property and delivering possession of the property to the buyer.

Q5: What are the legal remedies available to a transferee whose property is wrongfully transferred by a third party?

A5: A transferee whose property is wrongfully transferred may file a suit for recovery of possession of the property. They may also be entitled to damages or other legal remedies as per the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act.
