Space, Place, and Gender: An Interview with Doreen Massey

Q: What is the relationship between space, place, and gender?

A: Space and place are not static or neutral concepts but are shaped by social and political processes, including gender relations. Gender is a key factor in structuring our experiences of space and place, influencing our access to resources, mobility, and opportunities.

Q: How does gender shape our experiences of place?

A: Gender can influence our sense of home, belonging, and safety in different places. Women and men may have different experiences of public spaces, such as streets or parks, due to fear of harassment or violence. Additionally, gender roles and expectations can limit women's access to certain spaces, such as workplaces or political forums.

Q: How does space shape gender relations?

A: The spatial organization of society can reinforce or challenge gender stereotypes and inequalities. For example, the separation of work and home spheres has historically been associated with gendered roles, with women confined to the domestic sphere. However, changing spatial patterns, such as the increasing participation of women in the workforce, have challenged traditional gender divisions.

Q: What are the implications of these relationships for social justice?

A: Understanding the intersectionality of space, place, and gender is crucial for addressing gender inequality and promoting social justice. Policies and interventions aimed at spatial justice must consider the different needs and experiences of women and men in different places. This includes promoting safe and accessible public spaces, addressing gendered barriers to education and employment, and challenging spatial segregation that reinforces gender disparities.

Q: How can we challenge and transform gendered spaces and places?

A: Challenging gendered spaces and places requires a multi-faceted approach that involves:

- Raising awareness about the gendered nature of space and place
- Advocating for policies that promote gender equality in spatial planning
- Empowering women and girls to take ownership of public spaces
- Supporting feminist movements and organizations working to create more inclusive and equitable spaces

Can a plasma screen TV be repaired? The common problems a plasma TV might get, usually start with the screen. Note that if the plasma screen is broken or crashed, it's not repairable anymore. If this is the case, the TV needs a screen replacement, which may cost you more than the plasma TV itself.

Is it worth repairing a plasma TV? Plasma TVs are notoriously difficult to repair and are prone to developing multiple issues over time, so you might be better off putting that money towards a new TV that will last you another decade.

How to fix an LCD TV won't turn on? Disconnect all external devices connected to the TV. Press and hold the power button on the TV body for about 30 to 45 seconds. After 1 minute, reconnect the device to the wall socket or mains. Then, switch it on with the power button (on the TV, not the remote control device)

Is it worth fixing an LCD TV? If you want to reduce waste or have a simple fix, repairing your TV is worth it. However, sometimes the cost of repairs can exceed the cost of a new TV. Therefore, depending on the age of your TV and the parts you need to replace, replacing your old TV with a new model is more cost-effective.

What is the common problem of plasma TV? Burn-In – The Big Problem with Plasma TVs The issue is that an old plasma screen can either retain or completely burn an image on the screen, permanently. This is also an issue with modern OLED panels (but not QLED), and it could cause problems.

How much does it cost to repair a plasma TV? Plasma TV Repair Plasma TV repairs average $100 to $485.

Why was plasma TV discontinued? Until about 2007, plasma displays were commonly used in large televisions. By 2013, they had lost nearly all market share due to competition from low-cost LCDs. Manufacturing of plasma displays for the United States retail market ended in 2014, and manufacturing for the Chinese market ended in 2016.

What is the lifespan of a plasma TV? Normally a plasma TV has a half-life between 30,000 to 60,000 hours, meaning that the unit will lose around fifty percent of its brightness during this time of service. For instance if a plasma TV was left on for eight hours a day the expected half life would range about 9 years.

What can I do with a broken plasma TV? Your first step for proper disposal is to sell. If that is not possible, donate. In the case that your plasma TV is not working your only solution left is recycling your possession. Recycling companies like Recycle Technologies use heavy machinery that can salvage valuable materials from electronic devices.

How much does it cost to fix a TV that won't turn on? TV Won't Turn On Depending on the broken component, this fix can run you anywhere from $100 to $500 on average.

What does it mean when your TV won't turn on but the red light is on? 2 If the red standby light comes on, then your TV has power from the working outlet. This means there is an issue with the original outlet, or the surge protector if you were using one. 3 If the TV still won't turn on and the red standby light is still blinking, this is a sign that something is wrong with your TV.

How to fix a TV that turns on but no picture? Unplug the TV power cord for 30 seconds, then plug it back in. Try a forced factory data reset using TV buttons (only for Android TV and Google TV). You can perform a manual reset by pressing buttons on the TV and inserting the cable, even if the TV isn't powered on or isn't responsive.

Can you fix a LCD TV screen without replacing it? Unfortunately, not all TV screens can be repaired. The type of television you have, for example, LED or LCD TV, as well as the extent of the damage will determine whether or not a repair is an option. In some cases, it may be possible to have the screen repaired by a professional.

What is the lifespan of an LCD TV? Things You Should Know. LED TVs have the longest life span (11-16 years) with low brightness settings applied. Plasma TVs last only 5-7 years, while LCD screens last 5-10 years. Keep your new TV longer using its Energy Saving mode and a surge protector.

Is a 10 year old TV worth repairing? Don't bother paying for expensive repairs on an old TV. You might end up solving one issue, but a new issue would quickly take its place! You'd save more money buying a new TV! However, if your TV is still younger, such as under 5 years of age, it might be worth paying for a repair.

Does anyone still make plasma TVs? Plasma TVs (including from Samsung) were discontinued in 2014/15 - No Plasma TVs for consumer use have been made since then - anything that you see for sale is either used or remaining leftover stock.

Are plasma TVs easy to fix? Screens are pretty fragile and most cannot be easily fixed, rather just thrown out and swapped with a new one. There are no tips. Typically, it is not worth repairing.

What happens when a plasma TV goes black? One possible cause for a black screen with sound on a plasma TV could be a problem with the display panel or the power supply. The flashing green light might be indicating a fault or a power supply issue within the TV.

Can you fix screen burn on a plasma TV? Use Static to Fix LCD and Plasma Burn-In If your plasma or LCD screen already has image burn-in, you can try turning on white static for 12 to 24 hours. The constant movement of white and black across your screen in random patterns can help remove the ghost image from your screen.

Can you fix a scratched plasma TV screen? If it's not too deep, you might be able to polish it out with some glass polish, assuming there's no coatings on the glass surface. It depends on the scratch - However, these days, if your screen is scratched it is best to just get a new TV as the cost of a new screen and the labor would be more than the TV.

What is the lifespan of a plasma TV? The lifetime of the latest generation of plasma displays is estimated at 100,000 hours (11 years) of actual display time, or 27 years at 10 hours per day. This is the estimated time over which maximum picture brightness degrades to half the original value.

What can I do with a broken plasma TV? Your first step for proper disposal is to sell. If that is not possible, donate. In the case that your plasma Tv is not working your only solution left is recycling your possession. Recycling companies like Recycle Technologies use heavy machinery that can salvage valuable materials from electronic devices.

What happens when a plasma TV screen gets cracked? No, plasma TV screens cannot be repaired. Unfortunately, if the plasma screen is damaged or crashes, it cannot be repaired. In this case, you would need to replace the TV screen entirely, which may end up costing more than the original price of the television.

How do you fix a permanent screen burn?

Can you get rid of burn-in on an LCD TV? Unfortunately, TV burn-in is an irreversible change, and there is no fix available for the problem. This means that, no matter how long you wait, TV burn-in will not solve itself at all.

Can you use Windex to clean a plasma TV screen? No, steer clear of using Windex to clean flat screen TVs. While it does have uses beyond cleaning glass (it's great for your car's dashboard, steering wheel, and sideboards), Windex contains alcohol and ammonia. These harsh chemicals can damage a flat screen.

Are plasma TVs easy to fix? Screens are pretty fragile and most cannot be easily fixed, rather just thrown out and swapped with a new one. There are no tips. Typically, it is not worth repairing.

What is the best thing to clean a plasma TV screen with? A microfiber cloth wipe down may be the only thing you need to do to clean TV screens.

Are plasma TVs still worth buying? Plasma televisions don't get made anymore. This is partly due to the success of the LED TV, but it's also because the plasma technique has its limitations. For example, you can't make a plasma screen with 4K resolution without compromising on the light output. In addition, plasma televisions aren't very thin.

Can you leave a plasma TV on all day? While TVs can be used for hours at a time, it's important to give them a break every now and again. Leaving a TV on for an extended period will lead to a lot of energy usage. This will naturally lead to much higher bills.

Are there any plasma TVs left? Plasma TVs (including from Samsung) were discontinued in 2014/15 - No Plasma TVs for consumer use have been made since then - anything that you see for sale is either used or remaining leftover stock.
