What is the difference between a router and a gateway? A router is a networking layer Technology that May be used to manage and forward data packets into different computer networks. A gateway is something quite distinct. It is simply hardware or a gadget that acts as a Gateway between many networks. It also serves as a node that connects to other networks.

What is the difference between a router and a bridge? Routers and bridges differ in several ways. First, routers can connect different networks, while bridges can only connect segments of the same network. Second, routers use logical addresses, while bridges use physical addresses. Third, routers can handle different network protocols, while bridges can only handle one.

What is the fastest network topology? Mesh topology is the fastest network topology as high speed data can be transferred between nodes. Mesh topology is complex and difficult to monitor. Adding new nodes won't disrupt the network performance. Mesh topology has the highest level of fault tolerance.

What are the 7 types of topology?

What is a node in a computer network? A network node can be defined as the connection point among network devices such as routers, printers, or switches that can receive and send data from one endpoint to the other. Types of network nodes.

How do you establish a network between 4-5 computers and what material you will be required? You can get a 5 (or more) port Ethernet switch and five Ethernet cables with RJ45 plugs one each end of each cable. That will allow the five computers to connect to the switch and cover the physical network, but you will have to configure the settings in each computer manually.

How to connect 20 computers in a network? To connect 20 computers to a LAN, Ethernet cables such as Cat 5e or Cat 6 are the most relevant due to their ability to handle high data rates and compatibility with network devices. Wired connections offer stable and efficient networking suitable for business and educational settings.

How do I get all computers on my network? Type the command "arp -a" to view the list of all IP addresses connected to your network. This will also display the MAC address and the allocation type (static and dynamic) of all your network devices. Type "nslookup" followed by any IP address obtained through the "arp" command in the previous step.

How to create a network of computers? To do this, select your network settings from your computer and choose the option to set up a new network. To connect additional devices with a wired network, connect each end of the ethernet cable to the computer and the router. For a wireless network, each device can connect through Wi-Fi.
