Writing and Naming Binary Compounds Worksheet Answer Key

Objective: To practice writing and naming binary compounds.

Questions:

1. Write the formula for aluminum oxide.
2. Write the name for CaF_2 .

3. Write the formula for dinitrogen pentoxide.
4. Write the name for FeCl_3 .
5. Write the formula for lead(II) bromide.

Answers:

1. Al_2O_3 - Aluminum oxide
2. Calcium fluoride - CaF_2
3. N_2O_5 - Dinitrogen pentoxide
4. Iron(III) chloride - FeCl_3
5. PbBr_2 - Lead(II) bromide

Paragraph 1:

Binary compounds are compounds composed of two elements. The first element is a metal, and the second element is a nonmetal. To write the formula for a binary compound, place the symbol of the metal first, followed by the symbol of the nonmetal. The subscripts indicate the number of atoms of each element in the compound.

Paragraph 2:

To name a binary compound, first name the metal by its name. Then name the nonmetal by its root name followed by the suffix "-ide." If the metal can exhibit variable oxidation states, its oxidation state must be indicated using Roman numerals in parentheses.

Paragraph 3:

For example, the formula Al_2O_3 represents aluminum oxide. Aluminum is a metal, and oxygen is a nonmetal. The subscripts indicate that there are two atoms of aluminum and three atoms of oxygen in the compound. The name "aluminum oxide" is derived by naming the metal first, followed by the nonmetal's root name and the suffix "-ide."

Paragraph 4:

Another example is the compound FeCl_3 . Iron is a metal, and chlorine is a nonmetal. The subscripts indicate that there are one atom of iron and three atoms of chlorine in the compound. The name "iron(III) chloride" is derived by naming the metal first, followed by its oxidation state (III) in parentheses, and then the nonmetal's root name and the suffix "-ide."

Paragraph 5:

By following the rules for writing and naming binary compounds, it is possible to accurately identify and describe these compounds based on their chemical formulas and names.
