What is Phase 3 of FTO? During Phase III, training continues to a lesser extent in an environment where critical evaluation takes on ever increasing importance. This is also an opportunity for the FTO to review those tasks previously accomplished and to be sure the trainee is prepared for the final phase. This phase is four weeks in length.

What is the FTO rating scale? In order to effectively track the trainee's progress, the FTO uses the DOR to rate each observed behavior using one of two rating scales: Numeric or NICS. The Numeric Scale measures performance on a sliding scale between 1 and 7. The NICS Scale uses three ratings: NI—Needs Improvement, C—Competent, and S—Superior.

Why do people fail FTO? Sometimes people fail FTO because they just are not mature enough or need more time to figure things out than the department is willing to provide. There have been officers who failed FTO at one agency who turned into phenomenal officers at a different agency.

What are the disadvantages of FTO? The disadvantages of flexible time off (FTO) If there are unclear or no guidelines on taking time off, employees might feel guilty about taking a break or resist taking one entirely. As a result, your problem becomes not overuse of time off, but underuse — and that's dangerous, too.

What is FTO compared to PTO? FTO vs. PTO. One of the primary differences between flexible time off and PTO is that a paid time off policy requires employees to accrue days throughout the year. In contrast, flexible time off is given upfront and is available when the employee needs it.

Why become a Field Training Officer? You will hone your tactics and physical skills. Part of the job of the field training officer is to give the new officer experience so there is a tendency to keep busy with a variety of situations that lead to arrests. Some of those arrests will require the application of defensive tactics and physical skills.

What questions are asked in the FTO interview? What is your goal as an FTO? Tell us about a goal you accomplished in the last couple of years that helped your teaching skills. Tell us about a time where you had to measure the letter of the law versus the spirit of the law and how you resolved the issue. Tell us about your “career defining case” up to this time.

What traits should applicants for the FTO role possess and why? Selecting Field Training Officers As you continue your search for field training officers, look for following traits: Strong leadership: FTOs should be natural leaders, capable of
