Is The Walking Dead gothic? Although The Walking Dead's plot would unfold essentially the same way, no matter its setting, the Southern location can amplify its extremes. At times The Walking Dead overlaps with the storied genre of the Southern Gothic, which is known for simmering sexuality and explosive violence.

What are the themes of zombies? Zombies, and more particularly the zombie apocalypse, are a backdrop and context for human drama. They allow a commentary on issues of consumerism, interpersonal cooperation and conflict, gender and race relations, highlighting that 'Zombie films are about the humans. They [the humans] are the problem'.

Does Negan kiss a walker? While Negan doesn't appear physically forced into the moment — he kisses Alpha with the mask, telling her he views it as a turn on — it also doesn't seem like he has much of a choice. He's butt naked in the woods with the leader of the Whisperers. If he runs, he's not going to get very far.

Can I let my 12 year old watch The Walking Dead? While we don't recommend the series to children below 16, we believe with parental guidance and monitoring, The Walking Dead can be an engaging viewing experience for older teenagers. But as always, it's essential for you to remain vigilant and proactive in guiding your child's media consumption.

When was The Walking Dead banned? At the end of the 2019 school year, the Wallace School District in Silverton, Idaho, banned The Walking Dead over concerns about “graphic imagery.” A former teacher opened an investigation into the series, and a review committee was formed to examine the books.

What is the goriest scene in The Walking Dead? A scene shows a man getting his head smashed with a barbed wired baseball bat and his eye is seen. He then gets his whole head smashed and a bog pile of brains is shown. This scene is very emotional and probably the most violent in the entire series.

What is the saddest Walking Dead death? Noah was memorably killed when a horde of walkers devoured him, with Glenn Rhee forced to watch from only inches away, powerless to help. Noah's death was especially tragic because the series had built him up to be an important character moving forward, only to kill him off within a handful of episodes.
