Identifying Lathe Models and Other Key Information

How can I tell what model my South Bend lathe is?

Look for a plate or tag on the lathe's headstock or bed that indicates the model number.

Where are South Bend lathes made?

South Bend lathes were originally made in South Bend, Indiana, but production has now been moved overseas.

How do I know if my lathe is MT1 or MT2?

Measure the diameter of the Morse taper shank in the spindle. MT1 has a diameter of 22.05mm, while MT2 has a diameter of 30.23mm.

How do I choose a lathe speed?

Consider the material you are machining, the diameter of the workpiece, and the type of cut you are making. Use a higher speed for softer materials and smaller diameters, and a lower speed for harder materials and larger diameters.

Who manufactures Korean CNC lathes?

Daewoo Heavy Industries & Machinery, Doosan, and Hyundai WIA are some of the manufacturers of Korean CNC lathes.

Where are South Bend rods made?

South Bend rods are currently made in China.

Where are Colchester lathes made?

Colchester lathes are made in the United Kingdom.

How do I identify a lathe machine?

Look for the lathe's headstock, spindle, tailstock, and bed, which are the main components of a lathe.

Where is the serial number on a lathe?

The serial number is usually found on a plate or tag attached to the lathe's headstock.

How can I tell what model my guitar is?

Check the guitar's headstock for a logo or model number. You can also look for a label inside the body of the guitar.

How do you classify lathes?

Lathes can be classified by their bed type (flat or V-bed), spindle type (manual or automatic), headstock type (standard or sliding), and size (mini, benchtop, or industrial).
