1. What was the Great Terror?

The Great Terror refers to the period from 1936 to 1938, during which Stalin launched a widespread campaign of violence and repression against perceived enemies of the state. This included mass arrests, executions, deportations to labor camps, and purges within the Communist Party.

2. What were the causes of the Great Terror?

The causes of the Great Terror are still debated, but historians have identified several contributing factors. These include Stalin's paranoia about potential rivals, the rise of nationalism in the Soviet Union, and the need to eliminate opposition to his policies.

3. What were the consequences of the Great Terror?

The Great Terror had a devastating impact on Soviet society. It resulted in the deaths of millions of people, the destruction of entire families, and the silencing of dissent. It also weakened the Soviet government and undermined the public's trust in the state.

4. How has the Great Terror been reassessed in recent years?

In recent decades, there has been a growing body of research and scholarship on the Great Terror. Historians have challenged traditional interpretations and have sought to provide a more nuanced understanding of the period. This has led to a reassessment of Stalin's role, the scale of the repression, and the long-term consequences of the Terror.

5. What are the lessons to be learned from the Great Terror?

The Great Terror serves as a stark reminder of the dangers of unchecked state power and the importance of protecting human rights. It also highlights the need to be vigilant against the rise of authoritarianism and the suppression of dissent.
