2015 Global Hedge Fund and Investor Survey: Ernst & Young

Q: What are the key findings of the survey?

A: The survey reveals that global hedge fund industry is expected to grow by 11% in 2015, with assets under management (AUM) reaching $3.2 trillion. Investors are increasingly allocating to hedge funds, driven by the need for diversification, absolute returns, and risk mitigation.

Q: What are the top challenges facing hedge funds today?

A: Hedge funds face challenges in generating alpha, managing volatility, and meeting investor expectations. Additionally, regulatory changes, increasing competition, and geopolitical risks pose significant hurdles.

Q: How are hedge funds responding to these challenges?

A: Hedge funds are adapting their strategies to target specific market niches, focusing on risk management and performance enhancement. They are also diversifying their portfolios, investing in alternative asset classes, and utilizing technology to improve operational efficiency.

Q: What are investors looking for when allocating to hedge funds?

A: Investors prioritize consistency in performance, diversification, transparency, and low correlation with traditional investments. They also seek strong fund management teams with a proven track record and a clear investment strategy.

Q: What is the outlook for the hedge fund industry?

A: The long-term outlook for the hedge fund industry remains positive. Investors are expected to continue allocating to hedge funds as they seek to achieve their investment goals. However, hedge funds need to continually innovate and adapt to evolving market conditions and investor demands to maintain and grow their market share.
