Does the 14th Amendment apply to police? The Constitution gives states inherent "police power" to protect public health and safety. It is a broad power; however, the 14th Amendment prevents states from infringing on "the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States" without due process of law.

Does the 3rd Amendment apply to police? In the most recent Third Amendment decision handed down by a federal court, on February 2, 2015, the United States District Court for the District of Nevada held in Mitchell v. City of Henderson that the Third Amendment does not apply to intrusions by municipal police officers as they are not soldiers.

Can a police officer lie about being a cop? Both examples make one thing clear: cops can lie about being cops. It does not matter if they are in uniform or plain clothes. They do not have to identify themselves, even if you ask them to do so.

What case law allows police to lie? The Supreme Court ruled in Frazier v. Cupo (1969) that police officers can lie during an investigation as long as it does not “shock the conscience of the court or the community.” For instance, they can't tell someone that they will lose custody of their children if they don't confess (Lynum v.
