2015 Admissions Guide for International Applicants

Q1: What are the application deadlines for international students? A:

Application deadlines vary depending on the institution. For most U.S. universities, the early decision deadline is November 1-15, while the regular decision deadline is usually January 1-15.

Q2: What are the requirements for international applicants? A: International applicants must meet the same academic requirements as domestic students, including high school transcripts, standardized test scores (SAT or ACT), and English language proficiency (TOEFL or IELTS). In addition, they may need to submit a translation of their transcripts and documents if these are not in English.

Q3: How can I apply for financial aid as an international student? A:

International students are generally not eligible for federal financial aid, such as Pell Grants or subsidized student loans. However, they may be eligible for institutional aid, such as scholarships or need-based grants from the university or college they are applying to.

Q4: What are the visa requirements for international students? A:

International students who are accepted to a U.S. institution will need to obtain a student visa. The most common type of student visa is the F-1 visa, which allows students to pursue academic studies in the United States. Students must apply for the visa at a U.S. embassy or consulate in their home country.

Q5: What resources are available for international applicants? A: Many universities and colleges have dedicated offices or websites that provide information and support to international applicants. These offices can assist with the application process, financial aid, housing, and visa issues. Additionally, there are several organizations that offer resources and guidance for international students, such as the Institute of International Education (IIE) and the American Council on Education (ACE).
