5-Minute Chi Boost: Five Pressure Points for Rejuvenating Life Energy

What is Chi?

Chi, also known as Qi, is the vital life energy that flows through our bodies. By stimulating specific pressure points, we can enhance chi flow, boost energy, and promote healing.

Why Use Pressure Points for Chi Boost?

Pressure points are specific points on the body connected to energy pathways (meridians). Applying pressure to these points can unblock chi flow, release tension, and restore balance.

5 Pressure Points for a Quick Chi Boost

Here are five pressure points you can stimulate for a quick burst of energy:

1. Baihui Point: Located at the top of the head, where the two ears meet.
2. Fengchi Point: Two points located at the base of the skull, parallel to the spine.
3. CV17 Point: Positioned below the sternum, in the center of the chest.
4. KI6 Point: Situated on the inside of the lower leg, four finger-widths above the ankle.
5. LV3 Point: Located on the top of the foot, between the big and second toes.

How to Stimulate Pressure Points

Gently apply pressure to the pressure point for 30 seconds to 1 minute, using your fingers, knuckles, or a massage stick. Avoid excessive force.

The Scent of Apples: A Conversation with Bienvenido N. Santos

Q: What is the significance of the scent of apples in your writing?

A: For Bienvenido N. Santos, a renowned Filipino-American writer, the scent of apples evokes a sense of nostalgia and longing. It symbolizes the memories of his childhood and the bittersweet experiences of the Filipino diaspora.

Q: How does the scent of apples connect to your themes of identity and belonging?

A: Santos uses the scent of apples to explore the multifaceted nature of Filipino identity. It represents the longing for home, the search for a sense of belonging, and the challenges of navigating different cultures and societies.

Q: Can you describe a particular scene in your writing where the scent of apples plays a pivotal role?

A: In "Scent of Apples," Santos writes about a Filipino migrant who encounters the scent of apples in a foreign land. This scent triggers a vivid memory of his childhood back home, filling him with both longing and a sense of alienation.

Q: How does the scent of apples serve as a literary device in your stories?

A: The scent of apples acts as a powerful sensory trigger, transporting characters back to specific moments in time and space. It enhances the emotional depth of the narratives and creates a visceral connection between the reader and the characters.

Q: What lessons or insights can we learn from your exploration of the scent of apples in your writing?

A: Santos' use of the scent of apples reminds us of the importance of memory and the power of sensory experiences. It invites us to reflect on our own cultural heritage, our sense of belonging, and the challenges we face in navigating diverse societies.
