Understanding Business and Personal Law: Chapter 2

Question: What is the difference between a contract and an agreement?

Answer: A contract is a legally binding agreement between two or more parties that creates specific obligations. An agreement, on the other hand, is a more general term that encompasses any understanding between parties that may or may not be legally enforceable.

Question: What are the elements of a valid contract?

Answer: To be valid, a contract must have the following elements: offer, acceptance, consideration, capacity, legality, and a purpose that is not illegal.

Question: What are the different types of contracts?

Answer: There are many different types of contracts, including express contracts, implied contracts, formal contracts, informal contracts, unilateral contracts, and bilateral contracts. Each type has its own specific characteristics and requirements.

Question: What is the difference between a tort and a crime?

Answer: A tort is a civil wrong that gives rise to a lawsuit for damages, while a crime is a violation of criminal law that is punishable by the government. Torts typically involve harm to an individual or their property, while crimes can harm society as a whole.

Question: What are some common defenses to a breach of contract claim?

Answer: Some common defenses to a breach of contract claim include impossibility, frustration of purpose, illegality, and statute of limitations. These defenses provide legal reasons for why a party may not be held liable for breaching a contract.
