What is Winston Churchill's point of view about World War II? Sir Martin Gilbert defined Churchill's "astonishing vision" as "clarity as to the purpose of the war...that it was a just war, a war being fought against evil."³ In that context, it was necessary to define the enemy, the nature of the conflict and the character of his people.

How did Winston Churchill feel about war? In his remarks, which took less than six minutes to deliver, he famously spoke of his policy to wage war 'by sea, land and air', with the single aim of victory, 'victory at all costs, victory in spite of all terror, victory, however long and hard the road may be.'

What did Winston Churchill say about World War 1? On May 13 Churchill faced the House of Commons for the first time as prime minister. He warned members of the hard road ahead—"I have nothing to offer but blood, toil, tears and sweat"—and committed himself and the nation to all-out war until victory was achieved.

Why the Allied bombing campaign against Germany was controversial? It was the final months of the war in Europe, and would become one of the most controversial Allied attacks of the Second World War. The raids destroyed 75,000 homes and around 25,000 people were killed. However at the start of the war, the bombing of civilians had been seen as unjustifiable.

What are the morals of Churchill? Churchill's moral code Thus, the entire moral implies standing boldly in defense of right against injustice and aggression and so calls for both moral knowledge and the moral courage to act on that knowledge—the very foundation of Churchill's leadership in the Second World War.

What was Churchill's famous saying? “Never Give In” “This is the lesson: never give in, never give in, never, never, never, never—in nothing, great or small, large or petty—never give in except to convictions of honour and good sense. Never yield to force; never yield to the apparently overwhelming might of the enemy.”

Was WWII a moral war? World War II was really two kinds of conflict at the same time: a morally straightforward war of defense against unprovoked aggression, and a morally complex conflict pervaded by painful dilemmas, uneasy trade-offs, awful but unavoidable compromises.
