Textbook of Chemical Peels: Second Edition

Q&A on Superficial, Medium, and Deep Peels

1. What are the different types of chemical peels? A: Chemical peels are classified into three main types based on their depth of penetration: superficial, medium, and deep. Superficial peels remove only the uppermost layer of skin and are used to treat conditions such as acne and sun damage. Medium peels penetrate deeper into the epidermis and are effective for reducing fine lines, wrinkles, and pigmentation disorders. Deep peels target the dermis and are used to treat severe scarring and sun damage, but require significant downtime.

2. What are the benefits of chemical peels? A: Chemical peels offer a range of benefits, including:

- Reduced fine lines, wrinkles, and age spots
- Improved skin texture and tone
- Treatment of acne and scarring
- Stimulation of collagen production
- Reduced sun damage

3. Who is a good candidate for a chemical peel? A: Chemical peels are generally safe and effective for most people. However, they may not be appropriate for those with certain skin conditions, such as eczema or rosacea. It is important to consult with a qualified dermatologist to determine if a chemical peel is right for you.

4. What is the downtime after a chemical peel? A: The downtime after a chemical peel varies depending on the depth of the peel. Superficial peels typically require 2-3 days of downtime, while medium peels can take up to 10 days. Deep peels require the longest downtime, ranging from 2 to 4 weeks.

5. How should I prepare for a chemical peel? A: Before undergoing a chemical peel, it is important to prepare your skin by following a skincare regimen that includes daily sunscreen use and avoiding retinoids. Your dermatologist may also recommend a pre-peel treatment to help reduce potential side effects.

What is the B story in a love story? It should ultimately progress the plot, character arc, or theme of the A Story (and sometimes all three). Often this will happen like this: The B Story is a relationship plotline between the protagonist and Influence Character. Usually, they must figure out how to work together to resolve the main conflict.
