Why would someone use an ellipsis? The ellipsis (pronounced il-LIP-sis) is a type of punctuation that represents a pause or that something has been intentionally left out. When not to use ellipses? If you need to create a pause (a purposeful one, not an 'erm'), consider using an en-dash instead of an ellipsis. How to correctly use ellipses? Use an ellipsis to omit information from a direct quote. You may have a long quote that contains words or phrases that do not provide useful information.
