Section 3.1: Cartesian Coordinate System

Question 1: What is the Cartesian coordinate system?

Answer: The Cartesian coordinate system is a two-dimensional coordinate system that uses two perpendicular axes, the x-axis and the y-axis, to locate points in a plane.

Question 2: How do you find the coordinates of a point in the Cartesian coordinate system?

Answer: To find the coordinates of a point (x, y), start at the origin (0, 0) and move x units along the x-axis (right if x is positive, left if x is negative). Then, move y units along the y-axis (up if y is positive, down if y is negative).

Question 3: How do you plot a point on the Cartesian coordinate system?

Answer: To plot a point (x, y), start at the origin and move x units along the x-axis. Then, move y units along the y-axis. Mark the point where the two movements intersect.

Question 4: How do you determine the distance between two points in the Cartesian coordinate system?

Answer: To determine the distance between two points (x1, y1) and (x2, y2), use the distance formula: $\text{distance} = \sqrt{(x_2 - x_1)^2 + (y_2 - y_1)^2}$.

Question 5: How do you graph a line in the Cartesian coordinate system?

Answer: To graph a line, you need to know its slope and y-intercept. The slope is the ratio of the change in y to the change in x ($m = (y_2 - y_1) / (x_2 - x_1)$). The y-intercept is the point where the line crosses the y-axis (b). The equation of the line is $y = mx + b$.

1. Define the term "cell" and describe its basic components. Answer: A cell is the basic unit of life. It is composed of a cell membrane, cytoplasm, and nucleus. The cell membrane regulates the movement of materials in and out of the cell. The cytoplasm contains the cell's organelles, which perform various functions. The nucleus contains the cell's genetic material.

2. Explain the process of photosynthesis and its importance to life on Earth. Answer: Photosynthesis is the process by which plants use sunlight, water, and carbon dioxide to produce glucose and oxygen. Glucose is a sugar that provides energy for the plant. Oxygen is a waste product of photosynthesis. Photosynthesis is essential to life on Earth because it provides the oxygen that animals need to breathe.

3. Describe the differences between mitosis and meiosis. Answer: Mitosis is the process by which a cell divides into two identical daughter cells. Meiosis is the process by which a cell divides into four haploid cells. Haploid cells contain half the number of chromosomes as diploid cells. Meiosis is essential for sexual reproduction because it produces gametes (eggs and sperm).

4. Explain the role of enzymes in biological processes. Answer: Enzymes are proteins that catalyze chemical reactions in the body. Catalysts are substances that increase the rate of a reaction without being consumed by the reaction. Enzymes are essential for life because they allow chemical reactions to occur at the right rate and temperature.

5. Describe the different levels of organization in living organisms. Answer: The different levels of organization in living organisms are:

- Atoms: The smallest unit of matter.
- Molecules: Groups of atoms that form chemical compounds.
