How to watch Supreme Court oral arguments? Courtroom seating is available to the public on a first-come, first seated basis. An audio feed of the argument is live-streamed on the Court's website, and the Court posts the audio later in the day.

Is there an oral argument in the Supreme Court? The Court hears oral arguments in cases from October through April. From October through December, arguments are heard during the first two weeks of each month. From January through April, arguments are heard on the last two weeks of each month.

How long does it take for the Supreme Court to decide a case after oral arguments? The court files its written opinion within 90 days of oral argument. The decision becomes final 30 days after filing. Up to 15 days after filing, the parties may petition for rehearing; the court may also, on its own motion, grant a rehearing or modify its decision up to an additional 60 days.

What is the decision of the US Supreme Court on a constitutional issue? When the Supreme Court rules on a constitutional issue, that judgment is virtually final; its decisions can be altered only by the rarely used procedure of constitutional amendment or by a new ruling of the Court. However, when the Court interprets a statute, new legislative action can be taken.

What happens before the Supreme Court hears oral arguments? Prior to the argument, each side has submitted a legal brief—a written legal argument outlining each party's points of law. The Justices have read these briefs prior to argument and are thoroughly familiar with the case, its facts, and the legal positions that each party is advocating.

Where can I read full Supreme Court decisions? The Journal of the Supreme Court of the United States is the official record of the Court's proceedings. It is available on the Court's website from October Term 1993 to the present. The Journal dates from October Term 1891 to the present and can be found in libraries across the country.

What happens between oral argument and the court's decision? After the oral arguments have been finished, the court meets, in its conference room, to reach a preliminary decision about the outcome of each case. When the justices disagree, the greater number becomes the majority of the court on that case.

What do justices do during oral arguments? The justices fully review the record on appeal, so they know what happened in the trial court. The justices also read all the briefs and research the legal authorities, so they know about the legal issues in the appeal. During oral argument the justices will listen to the parties and they may ask questions.

How do you present an oral argument in court? Approach your oral argument as a conversation with, not a lecture to, the judges. Engage in an exchange of ideas with the judges and respond to their concerns. Don't read a speech to them. Be aware that at any time during your argument, the judges can and will interrupt you with questions.

Why do the justices interrupt attorneys during oral arguments? It is normal for a justice to interrupt an attorney mid-sentence to ask a question. This format can be surprising if you have not seen an oral argument. It is not meant to be disrespectful but rather allows the justices to make the most of their time with the attorney.

How much does it cost to file for the Supreme Court in California? Petitions for review in civil proceedings: $710. Answers to petitions for review in civil proceedings: $390.

What is the meaning of mandamus? In Latin, the word mandamus means "we command." By definition, a writ of mandamus is a formal, legal document that

Tiger Tactical Data Link Integration Exerciser (TTDIE)

Q: What is the Tiger Tactical Data Link Integration Exerciser (TTDIE)?

A: The TTDIE is a software-based system designed to simulate and test tactical data links used in military operations. It provides a realistic environment for evaluating the performance and interoperability of these data links, which are essential for coordinating actions between different platforms and units.

Q: How does the TTDIE work?

A: The TTDIE emulates the behavior of data link devices and networks, allowing users to create simulations of various operational scenarios. It can record and playback data traffic, providing detailed insights into the operation of the data links and identifying any potential issues or inefficiencies.

Q: What are the benefits of using the TTDIE?

A: The TTDIE offers several benefits, including:

- Improved testing accuracy: It provides a more realistic testing environment compared to traditional laboratory simulations.
- Enhanced interoperability evaluation: It allows for testing the interoperability of different data link systems and platforms.
- Reduced costs: It eliminates the need for expensive live field exercises or the procurement of additional equipment.
- Enhanced safety: It eliminates the risks associated with live testing in operational environments.

Q: Who uses the TTDIE?

A: The TTDIE is used by military organizations, system developers, and integrators to:

- Test and evaluate tactical data link systems
- Develop new data link protocols and applications
- Enhance interoperability between different platforms and units
- Train personnel on data link operations

Q: What are the capabilities of the TTDIE?

A: The TTDIE can simulate a wide range of tactical data links, including:

- Link 16

- Link 22
- JTIDS
- MIDS
- EPLRS
