The Great Betrayal of India after Independence

Q1: What is meant by the "Great Betrayal of India"?

A1: The term "Great Betrayal" refers to the perceived failure of the Indian National Congress (INC) and its leaders to fulfill the promises made to the Indian people during the struggle for independence from British rule.

Q2: What were these promises?

A2: The INC promised social justice, economic equality, land reforms, and a strong and independent nation. These promises were enshrined in the Indian Constitution, which was adopted in 1950.

Q3: How did the INC fail to keep these promises?

A3: Despite being in power for decades, the INC failed to address the deep-rooted social inequalities, poverty, and unemployment that plagued Indian society. A5: To address the Great Betrayal, there is a need for a renewed commitment to social justice, economic equality, and national sovereignty. The government must implement meaningful reforms to address systemic inequalities and ensure that the benefits of economic growth reach all sections of society. Additionally, India must pursue an independent and non-aligned foreign policy that reflects its national interests.
