Tap Dancing to Work: Warren Buffett on Practically Everything

In his 1966 autobiography, "A Fortune Magazine Book," Warren Buffett shares his philosophy on business, investing, and life. Among his many insights, Buffett emphasizes the importance of focus, hard work, and having fun.

In response to a question on how he achieves such impressive results, Buffett humorously quips, "I tap dance to work every day. I love what I do, and I think it shows in the results." He believes that when you enjoy your work, you are more likely to put in the effort and dedication necessary for success.

When asked about his investment strategy, Buffett stresses the importance of patience. "Invest for the long term," he advises. "Don't get caught up in the day-to-day fluctuations of the market. Focus on the fundamentals of the business and wait for the market to come around to your way of thinking."

Buffett also emphasizes the importance of being humble. "I'm not smarter than anyone else," he says. "I just happen to have a longer attention span." He credits his success to his ability to sit down and think deeply about the businesses he invests in.

Finally, Buffett believes that success is not always about money. "The most important thing in life," he says, "is to be happy. If you're not happy, you're not going to be successful. So find what makes you happy and do it."
