What is the story All Summer in a Day by Ray Bradbury about? All Summer in a Day Summary. "All Summer in a Day" takes place on the planet Venus, a generation after the first colonists from Earth arrived there. Venus has a peculiar climate: every seven years, the sun comes out for just two hours. The rest of the time, it rains—all day, every day.

What is the overall message of All Summer in a Day? The central message of "All Summer in a Day" is that people often act cruelly against those who are different from them. Bradbury builds this theme through the interactions between the children and Margot.

What is the conclusion of All Summer in a Day? But the story's end hints at an even darker future for Margot. Though she is already struggling mightily, Margot has now been forced to miss the one day of sunshine she so desperately needed. The story ends with Margot being let out of the closet, but things will likely only get worse for her from here.

What happens to Margot in All Summer in a Day? In the final line of the story, Bradbury says that "they unlocked the door, even more slowly, and let Margot out." This indicates that Margot is alive to walk out of the closet and that the children must deal with what they have done out of envy and cruelty.

What is the main idea of summer in a day? The theme of All Summer in a Day is that human nature drives people to be cruel to those who are different and inspire jealousy. In the story, a group of schoolchildren wait for the day when the sun will emerge on Venus for two hours.

What is Margot's biggest crime? William even shoves Margot. Bradbury describes this antagonistic relationship as rooted in the "biggest crime of all," which was that "she had come here only five years ago from Earth, and she remembered the sun."

Why do the children say Margot was lying? Answer: people say that she lying bcuz none of them have ever seen a sun but margot was on earth till the age of five and she knew how the sun was due to which the others students wew jealous of her and disliked her.

Why do the children mistreat Margot in All Summer in a Day? The children mistreat Margot because they are jealous of her for being able to remember what it was like to experience the sun. They refuse to believe what she says because they have never experienced it themselves, and are not able to relate to her.

Why does Margot love the sun so much? The sun inspires Margot to be her best, most creative self, and so she craves it desperately. While the lack of sunshine is an obvious and constant refrain in the story, no character more strongly represents the negative effects of its absence than Margot.

What is the big idea of All Summer in a Day? Jealousy, Bullying, and Isolation "All Summer in a Day" tells the story of a group of children ostracizing and bullying a child who doesn't fit in.

What is the author's purpose in All Summer in a Day? In "All Summer in a Day", Bradbury's purpose is to explore the inherent cruelty in human nature that arises from being unable to understand those who are different in some way.

Why does Margot refuse to take a shower? Margot's refusal to take a shower symbolically represents her negative feelings regarding the rainy planet. ... She wants to be dry, not wet, baking in the sun, not under the tyranny of a constant downpour, and so rebels against the shower. To her, the shower symbolizes the constant rain she hates.

Why did they let Margot out? Because Margot was not originally invited to the dinner. The Chef has a plan to kill each original invitee in a way meaningful to why they are being killed — when he finds out Margot is "innocent," he doesn't want to kill her, because she doesn't deserve it.

Why is Margot the only child who remembers the sun? One of the children, Margot, moved to Venus from Earth five years earlier and is the only one who remembers the sun, since it shines regularly on Earth. She describes the sun to the other children as being like a "penny" or "fire in the stove".

What is the main plot of the story All Summer in a Day? It tells the story of a class of schoolchildren living on Venus, where it rains year-round and the sun only appears once every seven years. "All Summer in a Day" is vintage Bradbury, stylistically similar to his science fiction masterpiece and breakout novel The Martian Chronicles, which was published in 1950.

What is the central message of the story All Summer in a Day? The primary message of Ray Bradbury's "All Summer in a Day" is that those who are different are typically ostracized and singled out among their peers. In the story, Margot is the outcast of her class because she was not born on the rainy planet Venus like her peers and thus remembers how the sun looks and feels.

What does Margot do in All Summer in a Day? Margot, the protagonist of "All Summer in a Day," is a nine-year-old girl who moved from Ohio to the planet Venus when she was four years old. Margot longs intensely for the sun, which she remembers vividly from her time on Earth.

What happened at the end of All Summer in a Day? Slowly, the children walk down the hall to the closet where Margot is still imprisoned. The children stand by the door to the closet and hear only silence. Finally, they open the door and let Margot out.

Why did the children hate Margot? They felt hostility towards Margot for her experience of Earth with the sun that they longed for and could not remember ever seeing it. There were rumours that Margot's parents were planning to take her back to earth. This made her classmates hate her even more.

How long does the sun stay out in All Summer in a Day? Summary and Analysis: Medicine for Melancholy All Summer in a Day. This story is set on the planet Venus, where the sun shines for only two hours once every seven years. It opens on the day that the sun is due to make its appearance once again.

What is the point of view of the story All Summer in a Day? Answer and Explanation: "All Summer in a Day" is a short story by iconic American science fiction author Ray Bradbury. The point of view used is third person omniscient, which gives us knowledge of the thoughts of all the children, which is important for the impact of the plot.

What cruel thing do the children do to Margot? Just before the sun is set to come out, the children, again led by William, torment Margot by telling her that the predictions are wrong and the sun won't appear. Then, they shut her in a closet to keep her from going outside—while the sun appears, she will be trapped in the dark.

Why do the other children mistreat Margot? Literary Analysis Of All Summer In A Day Margot gets treated cruelly by those in her class because they are envious of where she's from and her knowledge, or experience. Margot is nine years old, living on the planet Venus, where she moved from Earth, when she was four years old.

Did the children regret having locked Margot in a closet? At the end of the story the children regret locking Margot in the closet. The children felt remorseful about locking Margot in the closet but they could not change their actions or give Margot the experience they had with sun.

Why were the kids jealous of Margot in All Summer in a Day? The children were very jealous of Margot because she used to be able to see the sun often while they only see it every seven years. Their jealousy led them to lock Margot in the closet while they all got to go outside and play in the sun.

Why does Margot react so strongly to the shower in All Summer in a Day? Why does she react so strongly to the shower? She is shy and from a different planet so she feels like she is out of place. She reacts strongly to the shower because its a reminder of the rain and she really misses the sun back home in Ohio. Why do the other children bully Margot?

Why can't the children meet each other's glances in All Summer in a Day? They are depressed and crushed when the rain starts again. After the children see the sun, they "could not meet each other's glances" when they think what they have done to Margot.
