What the Customer Wants You to Know: How Everybody Needs to Think Differently About Sales

In today's competitive business environment, it's more important than ever to understand what customers want. And what they want is for you to stop selling to them.

That's right, customers don't want to be sold to. They want to be helped. They want to be informed. They want to be empowered to make the best decision for themselves.

So, how do you do that? How do you stop selling and start helping?

Here are a few tips:

- Ask questions. The best way to understand what a customer wants is to ask them. What are their needs? What are their challenges? What are their goals?
- Listen to their answers. Once you've asked questions, really listen to what the customer is saying. Don't just wait for your turn to talk. Pay attention to their body language, their tone of voice, and the words they use.

- Offer solutions. Once you understand the customer's needs, you can start to offer solutions. But don't just pitch your product or service. Instead, focus on how your solution can help the customer achieve their goals.
- Be patient. Sales is a process. It takes time to build trust and rapport with a customer. Don't expect to close a deal on the first call.
- Follow up. After you've met with a customer, follow up with them to see how they're doing. Answer any questions they have, and offer to help them in any way you can.

By following these tips, you can start to think differently about sales. You can stop selling and start helping. And that's what customers want.

Q&A

Q: Why do customers want to be helped, not sold to?

A: Customers want to feel like they're making the decision to buy, not being pressured into it. When you sell to customers, you're putting your needs ahead of theirs. But when you help customers, you're putting their needs first.

Q: How can I ask questions that will help me understand what the customer wants?

A: Ask open-ended questions that give the customer the opportunity to share their thoughts and feelings. For example, instead of asking "What are you looking for?", ask "Can you tell me a little bit about your needs?"

Q: What should I do if I don't know the answer to a customer's question?

A: Be honest and tell the customer that you don't know. Then, offer to find out the answer and get back to them.

Q: How can I follow up with customers without being annoying?

A: Follow up with customers in a way that's helpful and informative. For example, send them a link to a blog post or article that you think they might find interesting. Or, offer to schedule a follow-up call to answer any questions they may have.

Q: What's the most important thing to remember when selling to customers?

A: The most important thing to remember is that customers want to be helped. So, focus on providing them with the information and support they need to make the best decision for themselves.
