SSFips: Securing Cisco Networks with SourceFire Intrusion Detection

What is SSFips?

SSFips (Secure Services Framework with Federal Information Processing Standard) is a Cisco technology that integrates SourceFire intrusion detection capabilities into the Cisco Secure Services Framework (SSF). This combination provides robust security protection for Cisco networks by leveraging the industry-leading intrusion detection and prevention capabilities of SourceFire.

How does SSFips work?

SSFips combines the Cisco Adaptive Security Appliance (ASA) firewall with the SourceFire Intrusion Prevention System (IPS). The ASA provides stateful firewall inspection to block unauthorized network traffic, while the IPS monitors network traffic for malicious activity and blocks or alerts based on predefined rules.

What are the benefits of using SSFips?

SSFips offers several benefits, including:

- Enhanced threat detection and prevention: SourceFire's intrusion detection engine provides advanced threat detection and prevention capabilities, protecting against known and unknown attacks.
- Simplified management: SSFips integrates security management into a single interface, reducing operational complexity and improving efficiency.
- Improved compliance: SSFips enables organizations to meet compliance requirements for intrusion detection and prevention, including FISMA and PCI DSS.

How do I implement SSFips?

To implement SSFips, you need an ASA firewall and a SourceFire IPS. Cisco provides pre-configured SSFips solutions that simplify deployment and configuration.

You can also work with a Cisco partner or certified installation engineer for assistance.

What is the difference between SSFips and other Cisco security solutions?

SSFips provides a comprehensive security solution that combines firewall, intrusion detection, and unified management. Other Cisco security solutions, such as Cisco Security Manager (CSM), offer different capabilities and levels of integration. CSM focuses on centralized management and reporting, while SSFips provides deep security protection specifically tailored to Cisco networks.
